

Clayton Schelhase
2nd-Year Operations Intern

“I chose to apply to be an intern at JLG because of my history with the company, I knew that JLG was full of great people, who took pride in their work, and the products they built. Prior to enrolling in my bachelor’s degree program at Bloomsburg University, I was a full-time welder at the JLG Hykes Road facility while attending community college part time. After my first year of full-time academics, I was given the opportunity to return to JLG as an intern.

During my first summer, I loved the way I was able to use the knowledge I gained at school and apply it to real world concepts at work every day. I was not only applying my knowledge, but day in and day out my managers made sure I was assigned tasks that had a real impact on the business. After returning to school, and hearing other student’s internship experiences, I realized just how rare that all was. When I was offered to return for a second summer it was a no brainer.”
